PROJECT NO. ERASMUS-JMO-2021-HAI-TCH-RSCH-101047526

The 5th edition of the EU-PAIR 2026 International Conference is dedicated to exploring what the European Commission’s unveiling of the 2026 Work Programme, entitled Europe’s Independence Moment, that marks a pivotal shift in the European Union’s strategic orientation toward enhanced sovereignty, resilience, and global agency. Confronted with mounting pressures on security and democratic governance, intensifying geopolitical conflicts, economic and industrial vulnerabilities, and the accelerating impacts of climate change, the European Union is redefining the foundations of its political, economic, and technological autonomy. This evolving agenda raises critical questions about how the EU conceptualizes independence, how these ambitions are translated into policy frameworks, and how they reshape Europe’s role within an increasingly fragmented international order. Academics, researchers, practitioners, doctoral candidates, students, and stakeholders are invited to engage in discussions on June 18th – 19th at the Faculty of Economics and Business Administration, Alexandru Ioan Cuza University of Iasi, Romania.

The EU-PAIR Conference 2026 theme is Europe’s Independence Moment: Governance, Power, and Policy Transformation in a Fragmented Global Economy

Europe’s Independence Moment captures a defining juncture for the European Union as it confronts profound transformations in the global economy, geopolitical order, and technological landscape. Intensifying strategic competition, disrupted supply chains, climate imperatives, and rapid digitalisation are reshaping how power is exercised and how prosperity is generated. This conference invites scholars and practitioners to examine the governance arrangements, policy instruments, and economic strategies required for Europe to secure autonomy while remaining open, competitive, and committed to democratic values.

Conference Focus: The conference focuses on how the European Union is reconfiguring its governance structures, public policies, and economic strategies in response to growing geopolitical, technological, environmental, and societal pressures. It explores the ways in which power is exercised through institutions, regulation, and markets, and how public authorities, businesses, and civil society jointly shape Europe’s capacity to act in a fragmented global economy.

The interdisciplinarity of the EU administrative science field permits to have a broader list of subjects for debating from all areas of research. Participants are encouraged to delve into topics including but not limited to: EU governance and institutional transformation, security, defence and resilience, economic sovereignty and industrial policy, digital transformation and technological governance, green transition and climate governance, social Europe and skills, external action and global partnerships, business and corporate responsibility, and policy design, implementation and evaluation.

The following tracks are stated for the conference (but not limited to):

Track 1: European Governance, Institutional Transformation and Integration

Track 2: Business and Management in the Social Europe
